That's the essence of the First Class Male. Keeping a cool face, while going nuts inside. There's so much going on that keeping this cool is a tough job — even for an Eagle.

Then all start an envigorating day of academics. Then you got millions of extra-curriculars after school. Weekends? they're even crazier, with football games, and heavy dates with members of our neighboring girls' schools.

The elegant clothes we wear, the cars we drive, and the gorgeous girls we hang around with are just some of the facets of a First Class Male. We've got more - we demand respect, and we need good friends. All of this and more go into formulating a First Class Male: an Eagle.

The Meaning of Life

When one hears the words "student life," images of classrooms, lockers, and homework immediately strike the conscious, while subconscious messages of regimen, blandness, and despair bounce off the remainder of the neurons. However, this topic encompasses much more than what lies within the confines of the pale green walls of the building.

For the majority of Edsmen, "student life" refers to the fragile and complicated balance of studies with various extracurriculars in which they are involved. As most well know, this delicate system is more often than not tipping toward the activities side and an imminent collapse. Just as one falls backward in a chair and catches himself at the last second, the student suddenly receives a spark of diligence and is able to salvage his G.P.A. Those not so inspired are doomed to kiss kitchen tile, their only hope being a second chance to work on their grades; this time, without the distraction of any activities.

This practical preparation for the real world is often brutal, but after a graduate is presented his diploma and checks for the signature, he can be assured that he will not perish in society. What he learned both in and out of

Taking Up Their Crosses

St. Edward has an excellent Campus Ministry program. It offers Edsmen the opportunity to strengthen their relationship with God and others. this is accomplished thorugh chapel services, retreats, and community activities.

Chapel services, which are offered during lunch periods, give the students a chance to take a break from their daily schedule to receive the Eucharist and reflect on Scripture. These services are run by students who were commissioned as Eucharistic Ministers in October.

Retreats, which are offered to each class on a different level of intensity for each class, try to reinforce the belief that God is present in all of our lives. The freshman retreat is more of an activity night where they get to meet and relate with upperclassmen and each other. The theme of the sophomore retreat is "Dare To Care," which encourages the development of Christian identity and self-concept. Juniors are challenged to learn how to relate to others on a Christian basis and identity is still stressed.

The climax of the entire program is the Senior retreat. On these weekend excursions, seniors are taken through an unforgettable experience; in fact, most participants list the retreat as the highpoint of their high school careers. The faculty members that put on this retreat are the ones that make it so memorable, and seniors always discover a different side of these people, as well as a different side of themselves.

spewing smoke from its top and the smell of a short circuit from deep inside, and they continued raving and the gym kept rocking.

Elsa Reverendo, a St. Joseph senior, made a beautiful Homecoming Queen, as her date Tim Isabella was quick to notice.

The decoration of the gym left many dumbfounded. The back wall was replaced by a medieval drawbridge complete with moat. There was a dark forest where the east wall should have been. Emerging from within were a three-dimensional dragon and a knight on horseback. The audience favorite, however, was the west wall which served as a monument to Monty Python's classic, The Holy Grail. Lines like "tis but a flesh wound" brought laughs from many present, and the more observant saw swallows carrying coconuts.

The noble knights congregated for a night of music and merriment. They came from all parts of the Kingdom of Cleveland, having recently feasted at their favorite haunts with their gracious ladies.

But there was something different about these knights. They wore suits, but not of armor, not chain mail. The damsels were more graceful than any ever encountered in the days of chivalry. Yes, these were the knights of St. Edward... the First Class Males, and the bards shall sing of their unforgettable Homecoming Dance for many years to come.

The 1987 Homecoming was undoubtedly the best in St. Ed's history. The "Rocking Ravers" kept the party in full swing. Everyone knew they were one hot band when their left speaker gave out,

Following this comes a verbal distribution of the school's first class mail, penned by the various faculty members, sorted by the deft Br. James Everett, and read by seniors Jim Bridge, Neil Kelley, Pat McFadden, Mark Toddy, and Al Vass. "Neither rain nor storm nor gloom of night can keep these carriers from their appointed rounds." But for those messages of a more personal nature, Homeroom teachers circulate the second class mail which comes from almost every desk: from the Athletic Director's to the Campus Minister's.

As the announcements continue, the teachers wander the aisles collecting the postage due either for World's Finest Chocolate or for one of the Key Club's Holiday Season Drives. PROVING 'EM WRONG pirit day has always been an important part of the St. Edward experience. Pride in the school and in the school's reputation unifies the student body.

It is school spirit that allows the football team to endure the dreaded double sessions when they could be enjoying the end of their always too short summer. Pride in the work moves the Edwardian, Edsmsan, and Flight staffs to stay ridiculously late meeting their deadlines. The will to produce a superior production (and a lot of inclass sleeping) lets the Edwardian Players live through the dreaded "Hell Week." Many other examples can be seen throughout the school.

The Ignatius rally on October 23, gave the students the chance to go just a tad bonkers. The rally was the result of much hard work by the Spirit and Rally Committee. The night of the 22nd was a late one for all involved as the last rehearsals were held, the script finalized, and the signs were hung. The success of the rally was to prove a good omen of what was to come at Saturday's football game.

h, summer. The time of year when many Edsmen vacation, hit the local beaches, or relax with females. Not all students were so lucky, however, as they were compelled (or freely chose) to follow a twelve-month school calendar.

The school's reputation soared with many students' preparation.

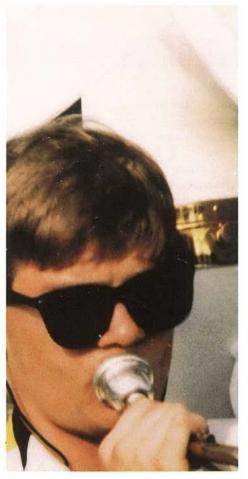

The musical Eagles landed at Band Camp on the scenic shores of Lake Beaumont, Austenburg. Bandos and the Dance and Twirl (the "pseudo bandos") drilled for each week's Battle of the Bands. A first: the Dance and Twirl, under the direction of Kas Cosgriff, created a male and female combination that was never attempted before.

The football field was home to conditioning athletes who suffered muscle pulls and various semi-serious injuries.

Some Eagles ventured to Muncie, Indiana, to the Ball State University Year-book Workshop. The result of their efforts is in your hands.

While many of the rest of the Edsmen tended to avoid the campus, a diligent crew of Edsmen maintained and renovated the halls and hollows. One of their most visible accomplishments was the new paint in the cafe.

FORWARDING ADDRESS

C irca 200 B.C., Plautus condemned the man "who in this place set up a sun dial to cut and hack my days so wretchedly into small portions." One can easily imagine that he was indirectly lamenting the brevity of his high school's summer recess, and perhaps violently damning his job for his vacation policies. Whatever the Roman poet's case, Edsmen during the summer of '87 found their time overwhelmingly occupied by a number of activities.

Of these the most time-consuming were the traditional summer jobs. Some Edsmen were lucky enough to obtain daytime office jobs and the corresponding air-conditioned comfort; others found themselves working steady hours at more menial tasks. The unfortunate remainder drew the "Mac Tonight" shift.

Of course, one worked in order to earn money with which to enjoy the rest of one's times. Among the diversions enjoyed by Edsmen over the summer were: The Untouchables, The Lost Boys, Roxanne, Robocop, and Monty Python's latest videocassette releases; Peter Gabriel, the Kinks, and the Jazz Fest (featuring Stevie Ray Vaughn and Branford Marsalis) at Blossom; the customary visits to Cedar Point, Geauga Lake, Sea World, and the zoo; extensive tours of prospective universities; parties (very innocent affairs); and ladies. alks through Great Northern were becoming tiresome. You had clearly rented every movie in the video shop. Taking a girl to dinner every night had started to have an adverse effect on your wallet, as were concerts at the Coliseum. What was a Clevelander to do?

Luckily, the resurgence of the Flats did not totally neglect the high school, underdrinking-age (which was raised to twenty-one in the fall) crowd. For years, this revitalized area on the banks of the Cuyahoga had been the hot spot for the nineteen-tothirty-year-olds, but this year brought about a shift to entertainments for teenagers and even the whole family.

The Old Arcade's Victorian personality lends itself to elegant downtown shopping.(M.Ma.)

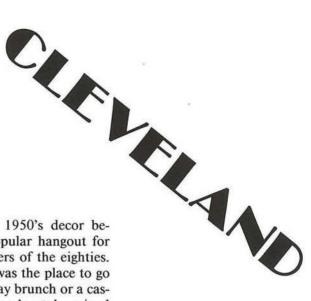

Downtown entertainment was not, however, limited to the Flats. The numerous events on Mall C, including the National Rib Burn-Off, were open to all ages. The All Nations Festival turned the midwestern streets into an international outdoor restaurant. High-fashion shopping was available in the renovated Halle Brothers Building and in the tony new Galleria. The Buzzards of WMMS sponsored many crowddrawing free concerts.. First Class Mate ue to the infinite pressures associated with maintaining a decent grade point average and full extracurricular schedule, some Edsmen found it necessary to alleviate this traumatic strain with the calming presence of a woman.

Beside the obvious benefits of having a girlfriend, there were many subtle and intricate good reasons. First of all, one never had to go to the mixers a month before a semi-formal to procure a date. In fact, the actual posing of the question was often unnecessary. A mere "What time should I pick you up for the dance tomorrow night?" did the trick.

Also normal weekend planning was unbelievably simple. This usually perplexing problem was solved by telling the female counterpart that you will pick her up at 8:00 P.M. She assumed you had definite plans, and you greeted her with a hurt expression saying, "I thought you were going to decide this week!" The guilt factor set in, and she quickly told you where she wanted to go, taking the decision-making burden off your shoulders for several weekends in advance.

The much-heard and hated "cousin-from-Illinois-thatneeds-a-date-Friday" line no longer could be used on you. If confronted with such a proposition, you simply replied, "Gee, sorry, but Adrienne (or Lisa or Mary or Katie or...) and I have plans on Friday. Maybe next week."

That undeniable desire for companionship and romance was the primary reason for having a relationship with a female, but the fringe benefits certainly didn't detract from the experience. T.H.

ORIENT EXPRESS

dsmen and their ladies were transported to the beauty, mystery, and wonderment of the Far East on February 27, 1988. At 8:00PM, the Orient Express shot forth from the Saint Edward Station and a spectacular odyssey began.

The entertainment was provided by City Heat who showed the horde of Edspeople that the '60's were definitely alive and doing very, very well. The audience, slow at first, eventually poured onto the dance floor in droves, showing that they know how to have a seriously good time.

The juniors and sophomores on the Winter Dance Committee placed a great deal of time, energy, and ideas into planning the evening. The walls of the gym were transformed into scenes of ancient yet alien beauty: the Great Wall of China, the flatlands of Mongolia, the beautiful but mysterious scenery of Japan, and the tranquility of India. The panorama of dancing students, jamming band, and friendly prefects was capped by the regal majesty of Japan's national symbol, Fujiyama. A Hokusai woodblock print could not have been more beautiful.

The Japanese have a quaint joke about their sacred mountain: "Mount Fuji is like a woman; the farther you are from it, the better it looks." Not so on this evening. To remind Edsmen of their evening on the other side of the world, photos were available. Not that they were really necessary, the night would live in most Edsmen's memory for a time to come. M.N.

First Class Meal

hen we first stepped into the cafe this year, we were confronted with a startling change. The pleasant, calming yellow walls we were used to were replaced with walls greener than a freshman at orientation. Yes, suddenly, it was true. The walls were now the same colors as the hamburgers. All right, we got used to that. But the changes didn't stop there.

The cafe was governed with more rules than basketball, the Constitution (Happy Two Hundreth birthday!), and Brother Joe's class put together. How about this one: "No moving the furniture"? Good Rule! Theft of chairs went down 47%. It was such a relief from the dark days of last year when many a student sneaked a chair under his sweater and took it home with him.

Who will forget Mr. Landolfo's famous words, "If things get too wild, everybody with his mouth open gets his ID taken." Well, how were we supposed to eat? Intravenously?

Who will ever be able to forget Br.James' running around with the trashbag collecting empty cans. He did get over-zealous sometimes.

A couple times he swiped a can before the student had a chance to open it.

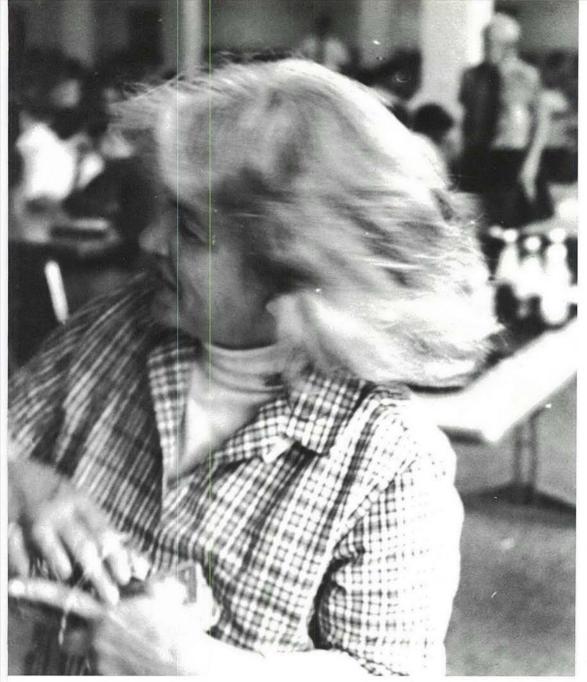

Actually, when you get right down to it, the food was pretty good. So, if you get the chance, go down to the cafe, order one with the works, and chow down. I'd join you — but I kind of lost my appetite. C.R.

hile varsity sports are for those few who survive the demanding athletic standards of their particular sport, the Saint Edward intramural program offers something for everyone. Of course, like its varsity brothers, intramurals require their own form of sacrifice: awakening in time to make it to school by 7:30 A.M.

The regular offerings of volleyball, basketball, and bowling were punctuated by the arrival of a new sport, floor hockey. Unfortunately, the new addition was made at the cost of softball.

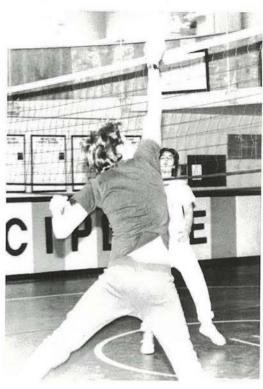

Whatever the sport of choice, participation was heavy and the competition was stiff — perhaps too stiff, as a number of games became more physical than they needed to become. Fortunately, no participants were seriously maimed, so all early morning athletes were in their prime and fully awake when the second period bell rang. M.C.

People Are Strange

The teachers, culled from universities nationwide and abroad, were a broad and varied lot. From the staid manner of Br. Bennet Nettleton, C.S.C., to the frenetic brio of Mrs. Barbara A. Lewis, the faculty exhibited the full gamut of teaching techniques, techniques the ultimate goal of which was the instilling of an analytical thinking process. Newcomers such as Mrs. Pamela Corolla and Mrs. Jacqueline Carev were met by seasoned veterans such as Mr. Joseph Figlar and Mr. James Nieberding. Upon settling into the tempo of the year, each teacher established his or her personal style ranging from the exact punctiliousness of Br. Joseph Chvala, C.S.C., to the relaxed, interactive atmosphere created by Mr. Joseph Serraglio.

Of course, teachers found fulfillment through interaction with the equally diverse student body. The students, residing in all corners of Cuvahoga County and beyond, were a demographer's delight of varying personalities, backgrounds, interests, and abilities. The wrestling protege found more than enough challenge for his physique while being tested in the classroom as well. Indeed, all students were able to maintain any pursuits which had already gained their attention while they were simultaneously exposed to other potential devotions as well.

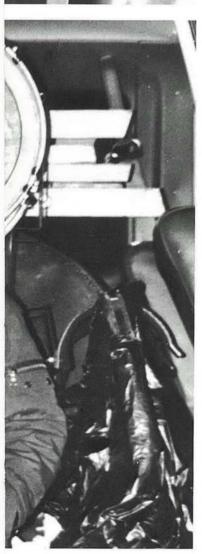

During the time spent here, there were also those unsung heroes who kept the gears of this school in working order. Maintenance personnel like "Ted the Janitor" kept a tight ship in terms of the abovementioned physical plant. The school nurse rides shotgun over the physiological state of the students. And, of course, the ladies in the cafeteria kept our stomachs full of the latest tasty offerings.

e socialized with them before school. They shared off-color jokes with us. When we needed a ride to school or home, they were willing to oblige. When you needed to talk out a problem, they were always ready to lend an ear. We worked with them behind the scenes at the plays and musicals, during production of the publications, or during practice for athletics. They were our teachers, but, what's more, they were our friends.

This is not to say that they shirked the duties usually allotted to their profession. The seats of Room 168 were filled after school with students whose teachers felt that a yellow slip was called for. However, for each desk occupied in that quote-lined cavern, there is a student whose discipline will win him acclaim and respect sometime in the not-so-distant future.

The primary function of our teachers is not ignored, either. While many high school students are out enjoying nights on the town many Edsmen are burning the midnight oil to finish homework and to study for tests. However, many offices are occupied by Saint Edward alumni whose arduous four years of work under demanding educators has prepared them for high-paying jobs.

Accenting those aspects and augmenting them both is the added friendship offered by the Saint Edward staff. This closeness creates a special condition between our faculty and our students. We do not become rigid tin soldiers, nor affected intellectuals. They mold us into unique persons that are mature, well-rounded. Our teachers, rather, our friends, make us into informed adults, disciplined men, first class males. P.M.

hat sets apart the Class of 1988 from any other class that roamed these sacred halls of St. Edward? What, if any, differences are there between this crop of seniors and last years? At first glance, no particular quality shines forth to distinguish them as superior or inferior. In fact, any casual observer would be justified in commenting that St. Edward High School's Class of Nineteen Hundred Eighty-Eight is about as totally average and absolutely typical as any senior class has a right to be. However, it is this very quality which does set these seniors apart. Their utter commonness makes them completely different from all else. In a word, these guys are ORDINARY.

What could be more ordinary than having fourteen National Merit Semifinalists, or being a significant part of the Ohio State Hockey Champions as sophomores, or Ohio State Football Runners-up as juniors? I'm sure that just about every other high school in the nation has at least two National Council of Teachers of English award winners, just as St. Edward does. Just because our Key Club happens to be tops in the state, or that our literary magazine is almost certain to win top honors again at Columbia, there is no reason to hold this class in high esteem. Even though the drama productions are regarded as the best in the area by theatre people, and drama competition is always a lucrative experience, there is absolutely nothing special about these young men.

Well, it is rather interesting that the last two digits of the graduating year are identical, so the Class of '88 is not completely without distinction. T.H.

"We are St. Ed's"

e are St. Ed's!" We all have heard these words chanted at athletic events or rallies, but did we honestly understand — or even believe — what we have so loudly proclaimed?

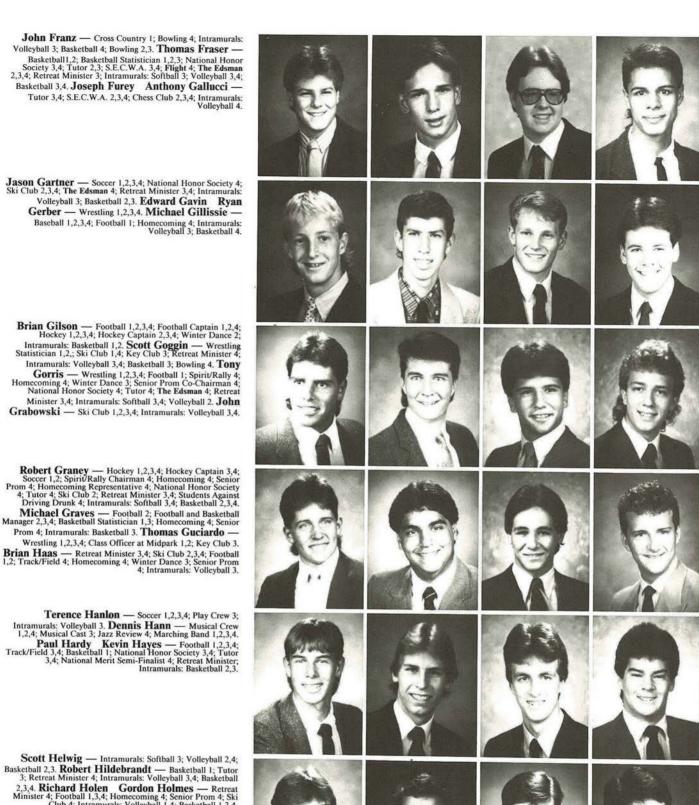

The freshmen did not. Remember how cowed they were at the rallies? The sophomores? No, they were much too preoccupied with the sophomoric things that sophomores do. The juniors perhaps have an inkling, but their awareness is more a recognition of class unity than anything else.

Indeed, only one class truly identifies with "We are St. Ed's!" for only one class clearly associates its identity not only with its particular group, but also with its school. This class is, of course, the Class of '88.

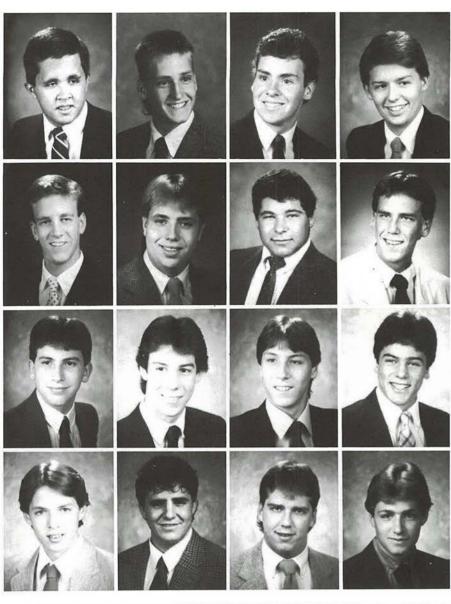

This is not intended to belittle the other classes, but to state a fact. To truly associate with "We are St. Ed's!" one must have proceeded through the levels which the underclassmen are currently experiencing. One must endure the hardships and rejoice in the joys of more than a few months to say "We are St. Ed's!" and mean it.

That is a distinction which belongs only to '88 and that is proper. The other classes will have to wait as we have. For right now, We are St. Ed's. M.M.

Eric Schubert: 1969-1987

Life and death are parts of the same great adventure. Do not fear to die and do not shrink from the joy of life.

After attending St. Angela's, Eric came to St. Ed's where he immediately started to make friends. Eric became involved in many activities, especially Ski Club and the dances. He was looking forward to working on the plays this year.

Known to his friends as "Schube," Eric enjoyed being with them on weekend outings and was ready to challenge them in any sport. He worked part-time at Santo's Pizza in Fairview Park. His hobbies included aviation, water-skiing, bicycling, music, playing his drums, and travelling.

We all knew Eric in different ways, but no matter what the relationship with him was, everyone benefited through the laughter, meaning, thought, and security he brought into our lives. Just by looking at him and his smile, you could tell what kind of person he was.

The real Eric was the kind of person who was there when you needed him. You could count on his giving through both the good times and the bad, never expecting anything in return. Eric was honest and trustworthy, always sharing his thoughts and feelings.

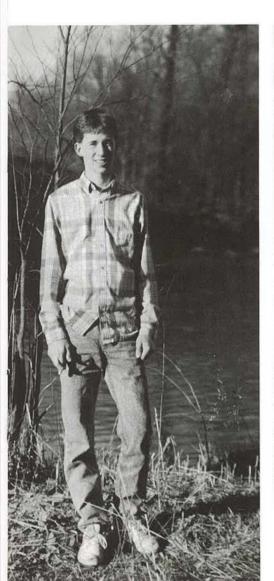

On August 17, 1987, Eric was involved in a fatal accident while vacationing at Marblehead. He was put into a situation that had him choose between the life of a close friend or his own. Through this mature and unselfish act, he showed the strength and courage that most never could.

Through Eric's death, we have learned the importance of time. Though the time we had with him was short, it was time well spent. Even if we use our time wisely, we are not guaranteed that our plans will be fulfilled. Now we look to the past and hold our memories of Eric close.

Schube will never be forgotten.

Almost There: '89

The class of 1989 was proving itself through hard work, dedication, and pride.

Many of the juniors were making the honor and high honor rolls, becoming National Merit Semifinalists, or receiving various other academic awards. Football, basketball, soccer, tennis, and wrestling teams benefitted from the strong presence of juniors who were not only on the teams, but also in starting positions. They were establishing themselves as well in track, hockey, and other sports.

Other juniors dedicated themselves to the fine arts and literary publications, and their knowledge and experience proved invaluable as they rushed to help meet the big deadlines or memorize those final lines.

Still other juniors earned money to buy a car, to save it, or to use it immediately. The class of 1989 was motivated by a desire to succeed, and through their effort, sweat, and struggles, they slowly began to make their mark. They hoped to inspire other classes to be the best they could become. They faced many a challenge, accepted it, and conquered it.

The junior class was becoming unified, and as one class, they hoped to be better able to represent not only their own interests, but also those of the school.

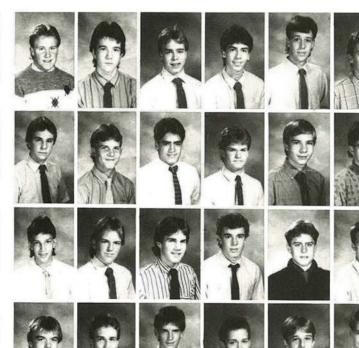

The class of 1989 was first class and became well prepared to take the reins of leadership in their senior year. D.L.

In The Void

pon returning for the first day of the '87-'88 school year, the sophomores found themselves as regulars among the Saint Edward crowd, no longer wearing the dreaded brand of Herbies.

To many, sophomore year is considered the hardest academic year of the high school year, most people holding this opinion having English in Room 213.

Some sophomores consider the second year boring because there is a minimum of class activities. There is no prom or even ring mass to get excited about. The only activity put on by the Class of 1990 was the Winter Dance (A Night in the Orient) and even that was co-produced by the juniors.

Yet there is a way to make such a hard and potentially boring year come to life. Becoming involved in the multitude of extracurriculars the school provided. Doing just that, some sophomores made their claim to fame by joining their favorite athletic teams. Others made themselves known through Key Club, debate, the play and musical, and the publications.

The sophomores took the year and produced, from the potential nothing, a fulfilling period in their high school career. Now is the time to look forward to making the next logical step: upperclassmen. J.H.

New World Man

t first our freshman year made us feel as if we had been demoted. During our eighth grade year our classes were given all the advantages of our schools because we were the kings of the hill. When we came here, we were the low men on the totem pole. The transition was difficult in the beginning weeks, but as the year progressed, we began to feel at home. Our class has learned how to deal with the changes that are going to happen in our lives. For example, we will be able to make the change between high school and college more easily, even though it is going to be twice as difficult as the one we just made.

This year has been very enjoyable. Following the football, basketball, hockey, and wrestling teams was exciting. Sure, it helps that the teams are great at St. Edward, but what was better was the school spirit that is involved in rooting for the Eagles whenever and wherever they play.

One of the best days of our freshman year was when we beat St. Ignatius in football. Being in attendance, I saw the highs and lows of our team. That night showed me something: that in athletics just as in academics our school has the potential to rise above any obstacle which life presents. {S.M.}

cademia form the core of an education at any institution, and this statement is particularly true of Saint Edward. Of course, St. Ed's has been characterized as a "jock" school—indeed, the sports have deserved the attention which they have been given—but academics has always been the primary emphasis in the Administration's dealings with students throughout all four years.

Yes, academics offer a challenging curriculum to under — and upperclassmen alike. The formation of young, hungry minds is not neglected at any stage. Who can deny the importance of freshman English, sophomore biology, junior analysis, and senior physics — or the inspiration of religion all four years? No one graduating can say that he was not given the opportunity to receive a fine education.

All of the above, however, is secondary to the true function of a Saint Edward education. This underlying motive is not just a challenging curriculum, but the formation of a well-rounded persona. In short, the Saint Edward education not only produces students but also creates the First Class Male.

he reason many freshmen decide to attend St. Edward High School is its fine academic offerings. The school requires freshmen study English, mathematics, religion, world history, health. All freshmen take physical education and can choose to study art, science, or a language.

The English department requires frequent reading of classics and popular litera-ture. Students study gram-mar, vocabulary and correct spelling. Some freshmen enroll in the honors level.

In mathematics, each student studies with students of equal ability. Most freshmen study algebra from the book Algebra I, while the honors class studies from Algebra II. There is an advanced class studying geometry this year.

A freshman spends one semester learning in religion about life as an adult Christian and about how to cope with problems he may be having in the present. During the other semester he learns about heroes in the history of the Church.

In world history, a fresh-man surveys mankind's experiences from ancient civilizations to recent events. Many of the freshmen do a quarterly project surveying the history of an area to recent times.

In health, students learn about the human body and what it needs to stay healthy. They also learn about the diseases and illnesses and how they affect the body. The students are also educated in the effects of drug and alcohol abuse.

In physical education, freshmen have the chance to play and learn about different sports and get in shape. The students try to stay fit and compete in frequent tournaments against teams made from their class. This class can be fun but requires effort and hard work.

Art students learn to draw and improve their skills. In this class almost everyone can improve his artistic abil-

In the area of music, students may join band or learn to play an instrument. They can improve individual skills and practice playing in a group.

Finally in the area of science, a freshman can take earth science and learn about the earth and its atmosphere. Frequent labs and experiments give the students hands-on experience in this

Each of these areas has dedicated teachers. A St. Edward freshman may discover enough challenges during his first year to learn the meaning of being a first class male.

riday, December 4. It was a cold, rainy day and I was returning from my case. I had been asked to discover who the officers of the sophomore class were and why the F.B.I. wanted me to investigate them. This is how the case went the case went ...

TIME: 7:45 AM. After coming into school, I was getting my books from my locker when a peculiar person walking in the hall. I followed.

TIME: 8:00 AM. SUB-JECT: Biology. I was led to Room 062. The suspect, as I later learned, was notorious crime mobster Br. Donald Allen, alias "Little Joe." He had been wanted for his part in the robbery of rare fish from the National Aquarium. As class progressed, I noticed the variety of different animals and animal parts in the room. Probably stolen.

TIME: 9:15 AM. SUB-JECT: English. I went to Room 213. The teacher was Br. Joseph Chvala, alias "Big Lou," public enemy Number One. After coming out of prison, he became a member of the Brothers of Holy Cross and an English teacher. His ranking: the best.

ranking: the best.

TIME: 10:20 AM. SUB-JECT: Religion. The third of the trio was Ms. Gloria Denos, alias the "Black Widow." Ms. Denos once posed as a nun to take donations from a local orphange. The take amounted to over $250,000, split between the partners. After release from prison, she began to teach religion. Her high salary paid off the debt to society in no time.

TIME: 11:05 AM. SUB-JECT: Geometry. Room 211. Mr. Gary Hitsman. The leader of the largest organized crime cadre on the North Coast. Called "The Boss." Was sent to prison on Murder One charges after shooting someone for mispronouncing a word. That word: congruent.

TIME: 1;10 PM. SUB-JECT: Spanish. Room 202's teacher, Mrs. Patricia Kaniecki, known as "The Godmother." Looking at her. one would never know she was second-in-command in the Hitsman gang. She went to prison for her involvement in a Brink's job. Stolen: $210 million.

TIME: 2:00PM. SUB-JECT: Typing. Tap, tap, tap in Room 214. Mrs. Barabara A. Lewis, alias "The Brain," third-in-command. Her prison term was fifteen years. She had been the inside woman for a local typing company. She was sentenced for maiming male chauvinists with her magnum typewriter.

LOOKING UP

The bell to start the day startles me to alertness in the characteristically frigid room of Junior Religion, 162. Any uninformed passer-by may mistake this for a drama class as Mr. Flament flagrantly attempts to maintain his audience's attention. As the period ends, Mr. Flament announces that today's quiz previously postponed from a week and a half ago will again be delayed another day.

The next period takes me to the fascinating world of Mr. Gill and his Analysis class. As I attempt to comprehend the conglomeration of trignometric functions before me, Mr. Gill breaks off in mid-sentence and begins a lengthy digression about his brother's friend's cousin's dog who was electrocuted during a thunderstorm.

Following our beloved homeroom announcements, I enter a room where the rattling of keys can be heard throughout the hallway. Br. John Quigley's typing class provides all students with an opportunity to improve their typing skills and prepare for life, where this might be required.

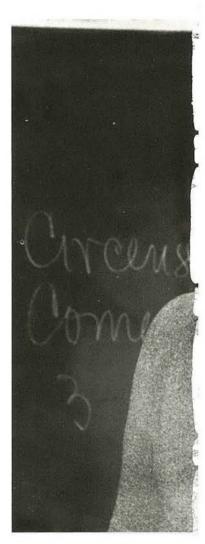

French III, an honors course taught by newcomer Mrs. Carey, explores the finer points of the language. This course more firmly establishes one's understanding of the language, as well as making him more aware of the predominant lifestyles in France.

With a new surge of energy from the fine foods in our world renowned cafeteria, I enter the American Literature class of Mr. Piche where I have realized that many American writers have been driven by either sinful guilt or insanity when composing their masterpieces.

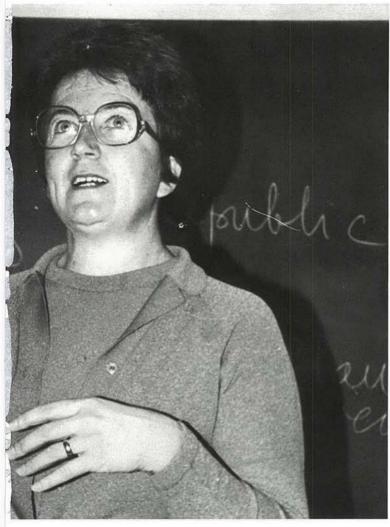

Next comes Honors U.S. History, where you learn that all the things Sr. Mary Belinda Carlisle or Sr. Mary Pink Floyd taught you in elementary school were very vague and general. "No, every Southerner didn't own 100,000 slaves, Mike." Br. Dennis also makes it known that in reality, George Washington was not the true father of our country. Ben Franklin, notorious for his rather promiscuous behavior, literally became the father of the U.S.

When 1:55 finally arrives, I prepare myself mentally for the last class of the day, Honors Chemistry. Also a new face in the crowd, Mrs. Pamela Carolla fills our minds with chemical formulas, ionization numbers, and balancing equations, while always moving ahead, even as certain students remain units behind.

Time will only tell how many of these courses will aid me in my future career choices, but until then, I must suffer along with everyone else. F.W.

Spring of Possibilities

Senior year. The springs of possibilities which started to ripple freshman year have each become full, raging rivers. The many course possibilities have now blossomed into full curricula of the student's crafting.

Some classes were, of course, required, but even in these must-takes there was a plethora of possibilities. While marriage scholars would have Mr. Daniel Flaherty and social issues scribes could count on the movie madness of Mr. Thomas Becks, English offerings ranged from the laid-back approach of Mr. Edward Mack, to the deep analysis of Mr. Joseph Serraglio, to the heavy workload of Brother William Dygert, C.S.C.

Although not required, many Edsmen take a fourth year of math. Some learned the Greek alphabet with Mr. Gary Hitsman, while others found themselves standing on the plateau of calculus with Mr. John Gill and a much-needed copy of Schuam's Calculus Companion.

While the required courses provided a solid liberal arts foundation, the electives engineered our academic architecture. For the practicalminded, wood and metal shops were made available, taught by Br. Leo Geiger, C.S.C., who himself has had articles printed in trade and industrial journals. Mr. Paul Burkart's drawing classes, Mr. Thomas Glasenapp's drama, and Mr. Stover's various bands were ideal choices for the artistic-minded Edsmen. And in economics and applied economics classes, Mrs. Barbara A. Lewis explained, among other things, what went wrong on Black Monday, October 19, 1987.

Finally, at either the beginning or the end of some sixtyplus scholars' days, were two of St. Edward's most likable classes. When one saw a student reading a newspaper or flipping through a magazine - most probably to the "International" sections one could easily surmise that the student was on a quest for the juiciest of the juicy tidbits to share with their fellow scholars in Br. Bennet Nettleton's Afro-Indian History or Oriental Culture classes.

ajor questions in life perplex us daily and lead us into a pensive quandary: What Is The Meaning of Life? Is There A God? How Did We Get Here?

Whatever the answer to the first two questions, most Edsmen agree that the answer to the third is transportation. Using ped power, automobile, or bus, we all experience daily travel to and from school (though the last is usually the more joyous).

Every morning, students must go through the torturous process of waking up. After stepping out of this too brief coma, some stumble into their cars. These vehicles range from brand new Porsches to outdated Buicks, but all of them, in most cases, get one to school. Some strive to improve the world by minimizing fuel consumption and pollution, so they take the bus. Others stumble to school without the aid of vehicles at all.

Once arriving at the building on 13500 Detroit Avenue, Edsmen immediately begin to think about going home. The dream does, eventually, become reality and students rush to their cars, the busses, or their running shoes. At home, we sit and anticipate another day of school to further our perception of the Meaning of Life.

Real Edsmen know that a day at St. Edward does not begin at 8:25 A.M. with the lovely chimes of the school's bells. A day at St. Edward really starts at 2:45 P.M.-the moment when extracurricular activity begins. Homework? Bah!

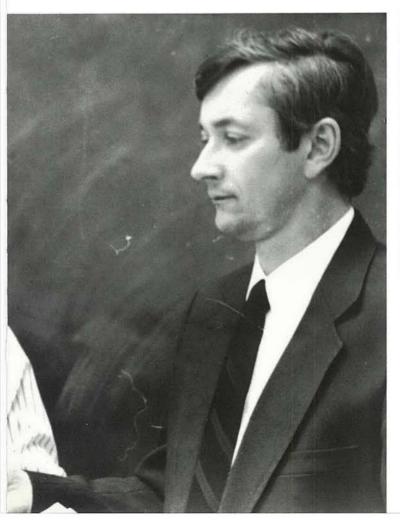

Time taken up in an Edsman's schedule by organizations varies. Some students are, in the parlance of those in the know, "joiners," the guys who show up at the first general meeting so that they can add more credits to their senior brag sheets. At the other extreme is the man who assumes the duties of leadership in every activity, the man whose family moves to another town while he is at a meeting, the single man who is responsible for onehalf of No-Doz consumption in Cuyahoga County. In the middle are those who do enjoy their sleep occasionally.

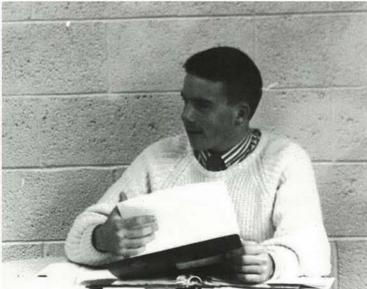

There is certainly a broad variety of extracurriculars to occupy an Edsman's time. For those with a gift for oratory, there are SECWA and forensics; for those with a literary bent, there are The Edwardian, The Edsman, and Flight; for those with musical ability or acting talent there are the various bands and fine arts productions. For every need there is an extracurricular.

Unless, of course, you would rather do homework.

Air Male

Skimming over the icy blue landscape, he hits a mogul and flies through the air, overwhelmed by awe at flight and anticipation of the fall. Legs retract at the impact of landing. White powder flies through the air obscurring the burgundy skier. Regaining his balance, he continues his swift descent flying past blurred foliage. With skill and technique, he is seeking pure thrill in an abstract and cold world.

The only emotion and the first essence of skiing are exciting exhilaration, except for an anomalous bright sepia feeling in his gut. This color, piercing itself through the ominous blue, is the second essence of skiing. This is the warm thought and anticipation of heat after skiing: a luscious Danny Boy's pizza melting the taste buds of your mouth.

This skiing endeavor is experienced by all who join the St. Edward Ski Club. Cannibalism in autumn, that's what skiing is all about.

Cheers

A fter refining their talents at the summer cheerleading camp held at John Carroll University, the St. Ed's cheerleaders were ready and eager to begin leading the crowds in a variety of spirited chants. Through rain, through sleet, and even through snow, at times sporting the latest in garbage-bag fashions, the cheerleaders have directed the sometimes sparse student section in cheering our varsity football team to victory.

However, the varsity football games are not the only places where the cheerleaders can be found. They also perform at the j.v. football games, as well as at the j.v. and varsity basketball games.

Headed by moderator Mrs. Glass, the cheerleaders continually attempt to better their skills through hours of extensive practice. Perennially an award-winning group, the cheerleaders, composed of students from St. Ed's, St. Augustine, St. Joseph, and Magnificat, have become an integral part of our beloved alma mater. They display the attitude of esprit de corps and pride common to everyone involved in the school.

AN O-KAY PRODUCTION

any people are blind to all the work it takes to put up a St. Ed's theater production. Director Kay Cosgriff pulled together veterans of past productions as well as amateurs and produced a hill-billy Air Force. The character Sergeant King had a new bunch of recruits that made a classification he'll never forget.

Irvin Blanchard, the snobbish southerner, who assumes himself "in charge," Will Stockdale, the naive plowboy, and Ben Whitledge, begging to be in the infantry, cause King's demotion, humiliation, and career destruction. Characterization, sets, costumes, and promotion came together last fall after three months of building, sewing, and memorizing to put together a play that hasn't been attempted in Cleveland in ten years.

The company of "No Time for Sergeants" was assisted by the Air Force to create real soldiers. The girls from the surrounding schools, in the cast and crew, played a major role in creating all the aspects of military life. The uniforms were genuine right down to the medals and even the airplane looked authentic.

The crew created incredible scenes that awed the audience. The plane was a project that everyone from the crew contributed to. The lights, props and sound are the essentials of a crew that can either sink or swim a show. "Sergeants" swam as stage manager Dave Moll and the "people in black" ran a smooth show.

Theater is a privilege, not a right, and the level of success depends upon the audience's reaction. They walked out laughing and believed that they had been tied to the medal.

> This year we accomplished the impossible by putting up "42nd Street," one of the most demanding shows for singers, set designers, stage hands, and most importantly, dancers and actors. Kay Cosgriff, the choreographer, and Br. William, the director, had a great time teaching left-footed guys how to dance and act at the same time. "42nd Street" is one of the finest shows ever put on by a high school, and it was the most demanding, most tiresome, and most of all, the most fun to ever have been a part of.

A Band For All Seasons

66B-A-N-D-O, I want to be a Bando!"

The phrase became a familiar cheer for the 1987-88 Marching Band, a dedicated group of seventy-six Edsmen and girls from surrounding schools, directed by Mr. Vernon J. Stover, Jr. The band, which began practicing last June, survived the tropical heat of summer while performing in the West Park Parade and at Cedar Point, and its summer session culminated in a week-long Band Camp.

Band Camp, on the beautiful shores of Lake Beaumont, proved to be the only location where learning pre-game and three shows (Latin, Swing, and Blues Brothers) could be coupled with frequent shaving cream fights (menthol and gel), water bomb blitzkriegs, moonlight escapades, arctic morning showers, and Cabin Seven's Bar and Grill. Despite this good-natured fun, drum majors Jeremy Amsden and Aaron Holtz managed to maintain enough control to teach the shows which they had designed.

The Marching Band continued performing in the fall during halftime of all home and away football games, braving several nights of cold and freezing rain to entertain the crowds. The Swing Show proved the band and crowd favorite, while "Sing, Sing, Sing" and "Wipe Out" captured individual song honors.

This year's edition of the Marching Eagles marked the debut of the Dance/Twirl corps, under the direction of Miss Kay Cosgriff, and featured another innovation: an actual "enthusiastic," marching percussion section.

However, the term "Bando" applies to much more than Marching Band. A Bando can also be involved in any number of other musical groups, including Concert Band, Pep Band, The Swinging Eagles, and Beginning Band. In short, a Bando is a superior product of the St. Edward music department.

GIVING OF OURSELVES

ey Club is a service organization for high school students. The projects and activities undertaken by the Key Club provided experiences outside of the classroom. The Club encouraged students to become involved with community affairs.

Key Club International is organized on three levels: international, district, and local. St. Edward's Key Club is an outstanding one.

Members have a commitment to perform at least fifty hours of service work. One has to be dedicated and willing to give of oneself. Members showed their willingness by what they did. Some projects include: the Muscular Dystrophy summer camp, food delivery to the Lakewood Christian Center, holding a Halloween party for handicapped children at the Aristocrat Berea, assisting the Holy Cross mission garage sale, purchasing drug and alcohol supplements for health classes, and the annual Thanksgiving and Christmas drives.

Key Club has affected many lives of different people. It will continue to do so with dedicated members. $\overline{M.I.}$

First Among Equals

he Saint Edward Chapter of the National Honor Society consists of the best of the class in terms of scholarship, leadership, character, and service. One can not just do well in one of the categories; to be admitted, one must excell in all.

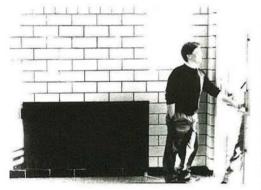

The officers for the Class of Nineteen Eighty-Eight are: President Larry Drumm, Vice-President Patrick McFadden, Treasurer Thomas J. Howard, and Secretary Christopher Butler.

School service is the purpose of the society. Members usher and guide for ident Thomas J. Howard, Vicevarious events such as Back to School Night and Open House. Also, the officers are responsible for updating the Honor Boards in the main foyer. Basically, any major school activity that is not under the aegis of a specific organization is handled by N.H.S. They play a part in the school's smooth running.

Also part of the school's infrastructure was the newly-formed Student Council, the student government. Pres-

President James Bridge, Treasurer Ronald Bencivengo, and Secretary Christopher Butler were aided by Moderator Barbara A. Lewis in forming the Student Council's initial powers. In the true spirit of the Two Hundreth Anniversary of the Constitution, a full constitutional convention was held, chaired by Convention President Michael P. Manti. Breathing the Refined Air of Gratory wo very important organizations at Saint Edward are the debate team and the Council on World Affairs. Both of these groups deal with members arguing for a cause in which they believe. The Saint Edward Debate Team, led by Mr. Richard Chunat, travels quite frequently to participate in tournaments across the state. They do this in preparation for the state tournament in Columbus held during spring. Junior Dennis Devine said, "Debating has enabled me to express myself more fluently. Joining the Saint Edward Debate Team has been a rewarding experience because I plan on becoming an attorney." Junior Kevin McNeeley added, "My only regret is that the debating season seems so short." The Council on World Affairs, led by Mr. James Nieberding. visits colleges during the school year to represent foreign countries in Model United Nation Conventions. They attended Model United Nations at Gannon University in Erie, Pennsylvania, at Georgetown University in Washington, D.C., and at Cleveland State University. SECWANS, as they are affectionately called, prepare and research the topics which are of world concern. Topics vary from terrorism to territorial rights in Antarctica. The members of the council gain an understanding of international diplomacy and acquire an appreciation of the magnitude of world conflicts. The highlight of the group's year was the Georgetown-Washington trip. A dedicated troupe of thirteen St. Edward students, ten St. Augustine students, and fifteen Magnificat students departed in mid-February for a four-day journey. During this time the students visited the Egyptian embassy in Washington, D.C. and also took part in the 25th Model U.N., sponsored by Georgetown University. Senior Tommy Fraser remarked, "The trip definitely was the highlight of the U.N season, it was the overwhelming realization of all my diplomatic desires and hard work which we all put forth." Senior Mike Manti after mauling the Cuban delegation added, "I hate those darn Communists!"

These two groups contributed greatly to St. Edward's academic reputation outside the classroom, while their members had tremendous fun as well. T.F.

Flight is perhaps one of the more wearisome extracurriculars to be involved in at St. Edward. A small minority performs the majority of the "grunt" work and these tasks are concentrated into a small span of the school year. In fact, Flight is perhaps an unattractive extracurricular.

But I fore it.

Flight involves benefits which are not readily apparent to the average student. Each layout, design, or editing task creates new intellectual challenges for the editors and staff; each photograph offers a creative opportunity for the photographers. Flight, like all literary magazines worth their salt, is an exquisite fusion of word and image, a delight to the mind and the eye.

Flight is also more than its production or final product; Flight is its staff, those loyal members who, under the guidance of Editor Michael P. Manti, Assistant Chris Noga, and Moderator Br. Joseph Chvala, strained their eyes trying to get past illegible handwriting and into the authors' messages.

oderator Joe Serraglio sat calmly in the corner, secure in the knowledge that the trustworthy staff would meet the deadline with time to spare. The arrival of Editor-in-Chief Paul Karl Lukacs had brought a new, previously unknown efficiency to the Edsman office; Serraglio had no need for concern.

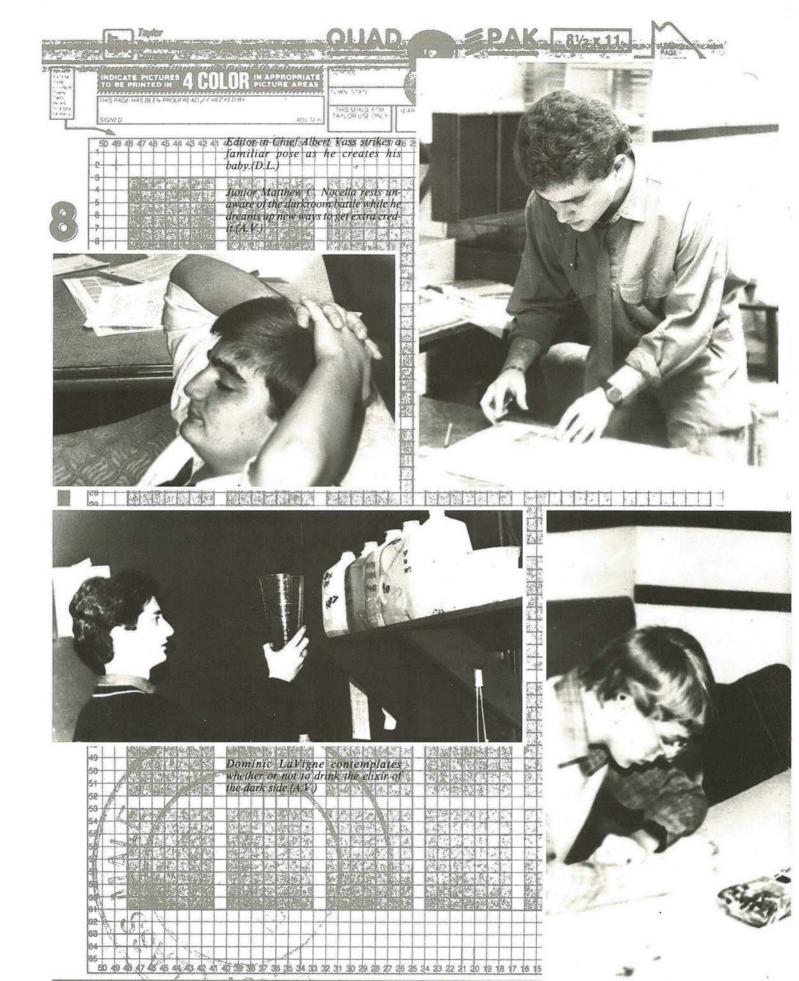

The staff was fully absorbed in the task of production; no hand was idle. Michael P. Manti diligently racked up headlines, and Mr. Editor looked on approvingly. Dom LaVigne returned from the darkroom with newly developed photos, and Paul was satisfied. Pat McFadden penned another superb satire, and P.L. chortled appreciatively. The Man walked over to Tom Fraser, obviously flustered with the functioning of the typewriter, and reassuringly patted him on the shoulder.

Tom Howard, student leader and newspaper executive editor, was, as usual, awed by Karl's incredible poise in the face of such an intimidating workload, "I don't know how he does it," he stated simply and shrugged.

am writing this in first person, and I don't care. I am sick of always compromising. This thing about first person comes from the theme article about which Paul Karl Lukacs and I had a blood fight, but that's how we get input and that's how we get things done around here.

In essence the EDWARDIAN '88 serves to mirror the lifestyles and times of the St. Edward community. This image is mainly relayed through the use of strong photographs. Heading this photographic staff is Dominic LaVigne, myself, Jay Fenske and various other photographers erratically popping in and out of the darkroom at various times during the year.

The rest of the staff consists of many hard working individuals. Paul Karl Lukacs is responsible for keeping things half sensible. Various others take part in this staff at various times. Tom Howard added much to this book's wit just as Mike Manti, Pat McFadden, and Vlad Munguia did. Through all of their, and many other's, hard work, the pieces of this yearbook were laboriously crafted piece by piece.

The job of editor-in-chief went to Al'Vass (that's me). My job was to put these finished pieces together into a contemporary mosaic, emanating aesthetic values as well as colorful essences of St. Edward High School. Our theme, "First Class Male," echoed this essence, and it was my job to keep it resounding throughout the book.

Just as a fine work of art, the job of the yearbook is to capture life in its essence to see the warm hues flickering in the overpowering blues. Truly, the job of any work of art is to excite not only the obvious sense, but also the senses of the other arts. A picture should make you hear the music associated with it, just as some dirty blues or hot jazz can make you taste cajun. Like art, a yearbook should make you see, hear, laste, and hear the bustle and music of our school. should be the definitive picture of the First Class Male at St. Ed's Alv

The primary reason for our attendance at St.Edward is education; however, rather than be second-class pencilheads, a large percentage of our First Class Males take time out of their schedule to participate in one or more extra-curricular sports.

Not only do we field green and gold teams, but our teams earn respect wherever they compete. According to one of our coaches, "If a team knows that St. Ed's is coming to town, they'll play the best game they'll play all year."

We kept up our first class tradition this year with a reborn basketball squad, statecontending teams in football and hockey, and a nationalcontending wrestling unit. We also made strong showings in track, tennis, cross country, and baseball in order to round out the athletic department. Many schools boast a good team in some sports once in a while. Others are perennially proficient in one sport. But we know of no other school that can show its excellence in so many areas each year.

First Class Team

his year's edition of the St. Edward varsity wrestling team is one of the youngest ever. Head Coach Howard Ferguson knew the Eagles had to work hard to win another state championship. The varsity responded to this challenge, and improved vastly since the beginning of the season. Led by Juniors Mike Castellana and state champion Alan Fried, they were well on their way to making number eleven a reality.

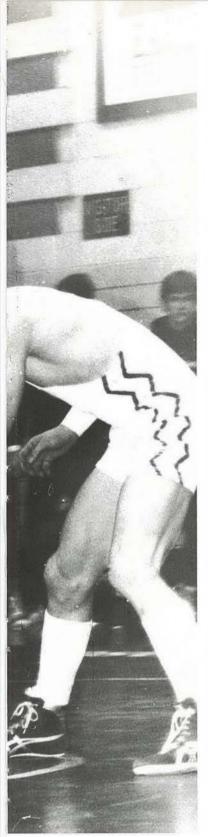

The Eagles opened the season with two impressive dual meet wins at the Ravenna Southeast Triangular. They also took first place honors at the Columbus Bishop Ready Classic. They wrestled their way to first place at the always tough North Canton Tournament, where they outscored second-ranked Nordonia by ninety-three points.

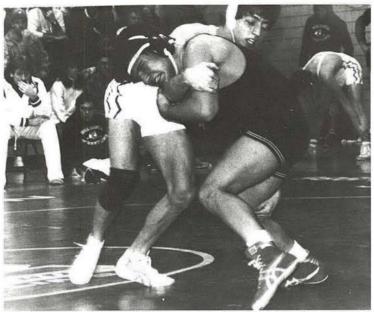

Next for the varsity was their toughest challenge of the season. In their Quad of Champions turned Dual of Champs, the Eagles faced off against North Allegheny. They were upset by the Pennsylvania co-champions 3425. The loss ended their dual meet victory streak at seventy-four and cost them the national title. However, the Eagles are not daunted. "A date in 1989 with North Allegheny is painted in the wrestling room, and the team is looking forward to regaining the national title next year in Pennsylvania."

The team took out their frustrations the next week at the Bellmont, Indiana Quad, where they thrashed the Indiana state runner-up and state champ. They also defeated Lake Catholic handily and then punished St. Ignatius 52-12. At the Catholic Invitational Tournament they were in top form, amassing three hundred nine points to second-place Columbus DeSales' 147.5.

In a year many thought would be an off year for the Eagles, they have wrestled well and improved consistently throughout the season. Coach Ferguson was confident of a victory in Columbus March 12. Unfortunately, the Eagles could not bring number eleven home to the Eagles' nest.

Building a Tradition

St. Edward's freshman wrestlers had a tremendous season. Under the leadership of Coach Urbas, the young Eagles posted an undefeated season with a 16-0 dual meet record and with three team first places in tournaments.

The final results of the freshman's season shows them to be a wrecking crew, destroying the rest of the freshman teams in the area. Identical scores of 66-9 over Elyria and Euclid started the ball rolling; the snowball effect followed. They beat everyone else, including a 75-0 shutout victory over Solon.

The freshmen are an important part of our wrestling dynasty at St. Edward. I asked Dave Gustovich, a freshman wrestler at 92-pound, what he thought about wrestling for St. Ed's. "I know St. Ed's has a great program and all I have to do is work hard. If I work hard, then I'm going to get better. The first of four years is over; I have three left to prove myself."

Also with a tremendous season was the Junior Varsity wrestling team. The J.V. team started off with a triangular at home and walked away with a starting season record of 2-0. Then came a challenge: they entered a Varsity Dual Tournament at Norton. Although they did not come away champions, they did great against the fierce varsity competition.

From the time after Norton until the end of the season, the Junior Varsity dominated other teams including St. Ignatius, Lake Catholic, and Nordonia. They walked through the competition in tournaments held in Sandusky, Madison, and Pickerington.

I asked Mike Chalkwater, a junior varsity wrestler at 160 #, what he felt about the outcome of the J.V.'s season. "Looking back, I would say we wrestled well as a whole, but we all could use work in small detailed areas. I believe that's what the next two years here are going to be used for: improvement."

The freshmen and junior varsity played their role this year and, by improving, will get ready to take hold of the Varsity reins in the near future.

Making the First Class Tradition

fter five weeks of the '87 season, the Eagle football team appeared rather mediocre with only a 2-1-1 record. Their ratings in all local opinion polls were fair at best. The ignorant masses saw only two victories compared to the other teams' five, not considering a tie with last year's Pennsylvania state runners-up or the one open date when no one dared to challenge the Eagles. The popular disdain would be abandoned by the season's end.

The team scorned the lack of respect and never for a moment lost sight of their ultimate goal — the state playoffs. Long, rigorous weeks of practice culminated in Friday evening resolutions to win, not in order to defeat a single team, but in order to achieve the playoff berth that was rightfully theirs.

At season's end, the Eagles had matured into the typical St. Edward football machine. In the final week, the Eagles besieged Padua for four quarters, and finally edged the Bruins, once again hoisting themselves into the playoffs.

The excited Eagles relished the chance in the Regional Semifinals to avenge their embarrassing loss to St. Joseph earlier in the year. After forty-four minutes of total warfare, the Vikings scored off a fantastic drive and surpassed the Eagles, who could not counter and finally watched St. Joe waste the last two minutes and walk away the victors.

The gridders were knocked out of state competition, but they had proven themselves worthy of the respect denied them early in the season. No one could question that for another year the St. Edward football team had lived up to its tradition. They were committed, they did come back, they were winners. They were First Class Males.

Mel Tillis says,"You ain't s-s-seen n-n-nothin' yet."

The Junior Varsity football team had a very good season with a record of seven and three. With shutouts against the first four teams they played, one of which was rival Saint Joe's. The Eagles then went on to win three of their last six.

With a strong offensive line, Jeff Gorski was able to throw the ball to one of the many capable receivers like Robert Kirkholder or Timothy Coughlin or hand off the ball to Robert Zaremba or Peter Simon to run for almost a sure gain in yardage.

But we cannot forget the defense, led by Michael Chalkwater and Michael Simonson. It was always exciting when Vincent Hugo, Donald Bisesi, and David Cook got onto the field.

One of the most important games of the season was the last one: against Padua. The Eagles lead six to nothing until a late-in-the-game touchdown by the Bruins. With less than a minute, Toby Thogmartin's catch put the team into position for Todd Goryanec's field goal. The tradition of excellence was continued.

Going For The Goal

The Saint Edward Varsity Soccer Team postedia 9-9-2 record. Coach David Fitzgerald, a former Cleveland State star, was disappointed with the season. The team consisted of nine seniors and ten juniors.

The team started off 2-2 by defeating Mentor and St. Ignatius for the first time in school history. The Eagles won two of the next five with victories over Elyria, including a bench-clearing brawl. and over Benedictine.

The Eagles dropped a one-to-zero match to the North Olmsted Eagles. The Eagles then notched three W's in a row over Elyria Catholic, Chanel, and Padua. The booters them tied Midpark and Strongsville. They lost two to Berea and Cleveland Heights, then defeated Eastlake North in the final game before sectionals.

The first game of sectionals found the Eagles scoring sixteen points to defeat Southview for a second season shutout. This victory set up a rematch with Bay Village:

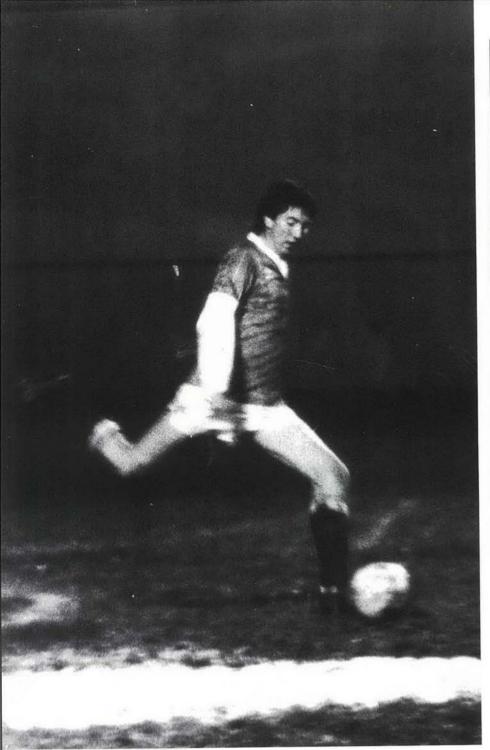

The Eagles were winning one to zero at the end of the first half, even though they started off slowly. The Eagles gave up four unanswered goals in the second half for the loss. This was the last Saintt Edward game for the following seniors: Alli-State player Kevim Lardie: Jason Gartner, Mark Lowbridge, Patt McNamara, Todd Krupa, Willie Pfaffi, Willliam Conrad, Craig Stolarskii, and Terry Hanlon.

First Class Tough

he J.V. soccer team started off this season by winning all four preseason scrimmages then losing seven of their first ten games. They were faced with some tough teams right off the bat and came out on the short end of many close decisions. The year was starting to lock rather bleak.

Frank Sikich, and later of coach Zoron Styko, the team started to come back. Three players from the varsity squad were called down to aid their younger team mates who benefitted from their experience and leadership. At season's end, they had sharpened their performance and whetted their appetites for victory. Thus, they finished the season with a record of 7-9-4.

The J.V. evidenced their character and determination in the second half of the season with their vastly improved results. With many of the same players returning bolstered by some very talented players from this year's freshman unit, next year's team should be a formidable opponent.

The Freshman team had a difficult year, however, and ended their season with a hard-to-swallow record of 4-9. The team never despaired in the face of some crushing defeats at the hands of many very dominating opponents. The frosh did learn a great deal this year and are looking forward to next year to implement a number of improvements so that they might avenge themselves.

With much hard work both these teams should fashion themselves into fine units that will earn other squads' respect on the field — the first class respect for which they strive.

Earning Respect

"Hey!"

"What?"

"St. Ed's isscity/ranked!"

"Well that's no biggie."

"In basketball?"

"Basketball!?"

"Yep."

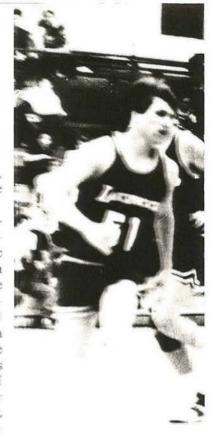

"I don't believe it."

Believe it. The St. Edward basketball program was on the rise and was looking to stay on the rise in the future. This recent climb could be accredited to Head Coach Michael Kearns who in only his second year managed to gain much respect for this once mocked facett off the sports program. Assisted by coaches Michael Girimont, Mickey Baretti, and Michael Boyko, the team turned last one this year.

The Eagles' starting line-up consisted of two seniors and three juniors. At the guard spots were the talented tandem. Juniors Eric Saunders and Pat Campbell Together they averaged about thirty points a game. Saunders's adept offensive ability complemented Campbell's menacing defensive wizardry. Along the front were Seniors Chris Sestili and Craig Stolarski and Junion Michael Zana, Sestili and Stolarski's combination of offensive agility and defensive toughness in the key allowed them to be effective inside and outside. Zana, although compar-year's 9-13 record into a .700 atively small for a center. gave little ground to the area's larger players.

> Depth also aided the Eagles. Senior Timothy Flanagan and Junion Rick Sabec provided quality time. With Flanagan's incomparable shooting skill and Sabec's tenacious rebounding, foul trouble never proved to be a problem. Also making sizable contributions were Seniors Jim Bridge, Michael Bartelme, and Christopher Butler along with Juniors Dennis Hanna, Larry Murtough and Anthony Hyland, keys to next year's team.

Soaring to New Heights

This has been a very productive year for the Varsity basketball team. The team is composed of hard workers and a never-say-die attitude. While looking into the future, that type of play is evident among the Junior Varsity and Freshman squads. The Junior Varsity came out with a quick start in the 1987-88 basketball season with victories in its first three contests. This was a hard-working and relentless group throughout the year. Coach Barrett says that the team has played its best basketball in games which it had lost. But this team's tenacity paid off as it bounced back to post a respectable record of 11-9. The Freshman team has managed to maintain its end although it was oversized by its opponents. Injuries also plagued this team. As the season progressed, the team's intensity increased and it also finished the year at 11-9. The determined team came through in the post season tournament to defeat a tough Glenville squad, only to be thwarted by Lakewood. Coach Boyko said that the team has progressed well together and should be a force to be reckoned with in the future.

Over the River and Through the Woods . .

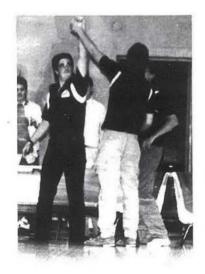

he 1987-88 cross country team experienced a great year in terms of building character. Coach Nolan said, "This team showed it could be competitive without its two state runners Greg Patterson and Mark Dailey of a year ago." The inexperience of the varsity squad resulted in a slow start, Joe Smith and Joe Humphries being the only two seniors on the team. The harriers reached the high point of the season by the fifth week when they finished third at a very competitive meet. The squad was buoyed by Senior Jason January, who had moved into the fifth-best varsity slot, and Junior Tom Benham, the best surviving varsity runner by the last meet. An injury to Rob Ganz began a rash of injuries that would sideline Humphries, January, and Senior Neil Kelly from competitive running for the rest of the season. The team concluded its season with a middle-of-the-pack finish at the District meet with Juniors Matt Nortz and Tom Benham pacing the youthful Eagle harriers.

This year the varsity golf squad went through a socalled "rebuilding year" according to coach Tom Glasenapp. Besides having Senior Scott Whitesell as this year's only returning golfer, the team also suffered a big loss in losing A.J. Barth, Class of '87. Whitesell filled the gap well along with Junior Winston Breeden. Other varsity golfers included Junior Dennis Jack, Sophomore Jeff Cachat, and Freshman Danny Madden.

The golfers started off the season on a winning note with a 4-3 victory over Buckey High School. The rest of the season ran like a roller coaster with wins and losses being interspersed throughout its course.

J.S

Cruising Down the Lanes

his is the third year that the swim team has been under the command of coach Gloria Denos. The tankers started the season in November, traveling daily to the Tri-C Parma campus after school. Swim practice lasts for an average of two hours and then it is back to the school van and ultimately home. At the beginning of the 1987-88 season, there was a total of thirty swimmers ready for anything. However, at the end only twenty-four remained, and only eleven went to the district tournament.

This year's team was headed by Senior co-captains Neil Laurent and Ray Erker. Unfortunately, Erker was forced to retire early, but his position was filled by classmate Jason January who carried on his spirit of team unity.

Despite the numerous injuries, change of captains, lack of experience, and problems with transportation, the tankers won two meets, lost five close ones, and placed second and fourth in the Bedford and the Lakewood relays, respectively.

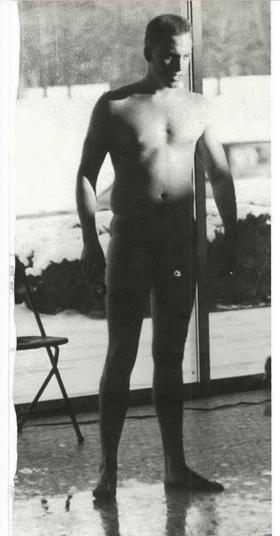

The bowling team helped maintain the St. Edward first class tradition with a very formidable team this year. Senior captain John Mihalek, with the aid of classmate Tony Ballachino and Junior Rich Juergens, led the team into contention for first place. At the end of a successful season, the kegglers had defeated ten of their fourteen rivals in the scratch division and seven of thirteen in the handicap division. The team finished third in both divisions much to the pleasure of coach Br. Jerome Meyer.

Led by captain John Mihalek the 1988 Bowling Team finished third place over all in both scratch and handicapped divisions.

It Takes Two to Fungo

The pitchers and catchers began practicing in January for the upcoming season. They were joined in February by the rest of the team led by Coach Michael Girimont who was in his second season as the Eagles' coach.

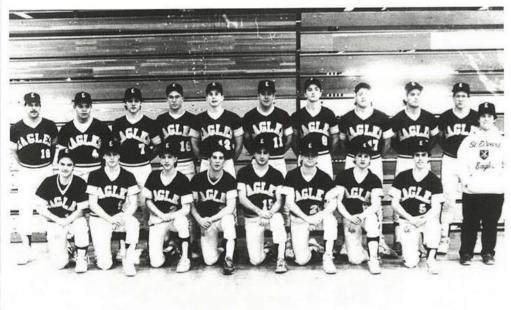

Once again, Girimont stressed defense, aggressiveness, and pitching, areas that would improve upon last year's 18-6 record. Practices dwelt on items ranging from throwing strikes to the running of many defensive drills. Due to the less than perfect weather, the team was forced to practice in the confines of the gym. The drills were mastered before the weather broke.

With the stress on pitching, Girimont turned to his two returning lettermen on the staff, Seniors Joe Potts and Dan Enovitch. They were helped out by Juniors Matt Mehok, Joe Berish, Mike Hamdan, and Sophomore Toby Thogmartin. The catching duties were held by Mark Blum and Sam Kucia.

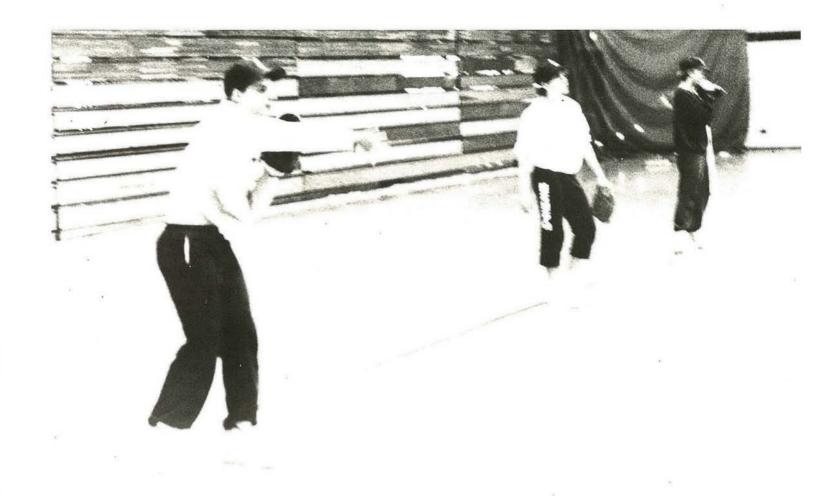

In the field, the Eagles were bolstered by returning lettermen Scott McGuire and Pat Campbell, both juniors. Seniors Bill Scanlon and Mike Gillisie, also returning lettermen, added power to the Eagles line-up, while Senior Bill McIntyre played a solid infield and also shared duties on the mound. Tom Plisko added more power to the Eagles' line-up as well as playing solid outfield.

With the team in place, Coach Girimont and the team headed out on the road to play their toughest schedule in years. The solid team carried on the St. Edward sports tradition.

The Eagles of Summer

The Junior Varsity Baseball Team has always been the stepping stone, the suspension bridge, the so-close-but of our future diamond kings. One day the Eagle-classic names of Robert Zaremba, Louis Rivera, and Gary Bajzer may one day carry the same sunny, glorious connotations of fields of green and roaring fans that are currently carried by the names Tyrone Cobb, Peter Rose, and George Ruth. Coach McGuire did his Thomas Lasorda/William Martin imitation in his quest for pop fly perfection. He pulled the best out of what was originally a motley group bound together only by their common love of pelting the leather ball. Coach McGuire is to thank for his creation of of the not ready for prime time players who went the distance to round the bases of success.

People Who Run Without Being Chased

hen February left shrouded in flurries, March continued in an even worse fashion as the 1988 Varsity Tennis Team tried to prepare for their upcoming season. They had practiced in clinics at River Oaks with North Olmsted throughout the winter in hopes of becoming first class. Unfortunately, as the preseason began, two factors hindered the 1988

Varsity Tennis Team: experience and the weather. The team had lost all of its starters but Senior Todd Ashdown who was injured.

The preseason was wiped out by unrelenting snowfall and other forces of nature. As a result, the team was youthful and inexperienced when the season commenced. However, this young club played their hearts out and fought to be their best against the limits of being young and inexperienced. They strove to make their season a memorable one for not only themselves, but also Coach Glasenapp, in his third season back with the team. Although this was a rebuilding year for the team, the Spring of 1989 should produce a new first class tradition.

The track team also began their season in the midst of the late winter. Training hard and working for every step they took, the tracksters took this dedication and perserverance into their season where they showed everyone in Ohio the meaning of a first class effort.

FIRST CLASS MALE: A macro-picture of black gravel next to a glowing yellow, as you peel your face off the street. You can look at your years now, and see where you got up. Do you look at your sterile white mansion to the right or your warm hovel to the left? You can see that your spirit has become cheese, good. Does your closest friend swim in the sand or sip dry tea by the postcard of the Bahamas? I know — you have enough money to last you an eternity on this level.

Enough of this life, how about this year? We passed the citrus spectrum, cannibalism in autumn, and the warm blues — it's great to look at them, so keep the book.

Some day you will be looking at the retrospective decanter of your life, but for now just keep yourself in the class you're in . . .

Colophon

Volume thirty-six, the St. Edward High School Edwardian, was published by Taylor Publishing Company in Dallas, TX. The cover is made of two hand-tinted black and white photographs and business envelopes as art screened eighty percent gray with green spot color. Ink is black. Headlines were assorted (as was just about everything else). Copy is printed ten point Times Roman and captions are eight point Times Roman Italic. Brags and finer print in six point Times Roman or Italic. Initial letters of articles are thirty point.

Tmax 400 ASA film was used for the first time in abundance. The new Kodachrome 200 was used for the first time in the Edwardian and assorted film speeds of Kodacolor were used for color photographs which were developed by Denison Studios

Thanks

I am sending a big thanks to everyone contributing to the publication of this fine yearbook. First of all my right hand man in the darkroom, Dom. Great thanks are in order for major help (practically all of the typing, actually this is the only thing I have typed on this computer thingy) from Paul Karl (I don't know why he's so hot for his middle name), and Jeremy Amsden. Special thanks to the parents of those on staff for the patience (thanx Mom and Dad). Thanx, Mr. Peach, for the flower child inspiration (I bet he's glad I'm outta here).

Actually I don't want to take too long because it's eleven o'clock, but I would like also to thank the Majestic Moose for his anti-UTA inspirations. I would also like to thank my awesome staff for wiping the moose's nose.

The writers of previous thanx have been sacked, so we now give you the real thanx, which put us through great time and expense, but hey, you're worth it (kinda).

Thank you very much! (and have a Merry X-mas) And finally, a very solemn-Goodbye.
